Trading Digital Trades and other leveraged or derivative-style products offered by ON SPOT GROUP LLC can result in the rapid loss of some or all of the money you deposit. You should not fund an account with money you cannot afford to lose. This notice does not list every possible risk.

By registering, opening a live Account, or placing a trade, you confirm that you have read this Risk Disclosure, understand that outcomes are uncertain, and still wish to proceed. Past results are not a reliable guide to future results.

1. Purpose of this notice

We publish this notice so that you can make an informed decision before using the platform. We do not, by this notice, recommend that you trade, and we do not assess whether trading is suitable for your personal circumstances beyond any checks we are required to make.

2. Market and product risks

- All-or-nothing outcomes. A Digital Trade typically pays a fixed return if your prediction is correct at expiry and otherwise results in loss of the stake. Small price movements can decide the result.
- Volatility. Asset prices can move sharply because of news, liquidity gaps, economic data, geopolitical events or thin trading. Gaps may occur around weekends and session opens.
- Pricing. Quotes on the platform are set by the Company and may differ from prices on exchanges or other brokers. You cannot assume you can hedge or exit at a third-party price.
- Liquidity and availability. An Asset may be paused, removed, or quoted with wider conditions when markets are disordered.
- Limited lifespan. Once expiry is reached, the trade settles. You may not be able to unwind it in the way you would close a spot position elsewhere.

3. Technical and operational risks

Internet latency, power cuts, device failure, browser issues, denial-of-service events, and faults in third-party networks can delay or prevent you from placing or viewing trades. The Company's systems can also experience interruption. You should assume that a trade is accepted only when confirmed in the Account history generated by our servers.

Unauthorised access to your credentials can lead to trades and withdrawals you did not intend. Enable available security features and keep software updated.

4. Information on the platform

Charts, news snippets, signals, educational material and statistics are provided for information only. They are not personal recommendations and may be incomplete, delayed or wrong. You remain solely responsible for every trading decision.

Third-party content may appear on or through the website. The Company does not control and is not responsible for that content.

5. Financial capacity

You should trade only if you understand how Digital Trades work, can monitor open exposure, and can absorb a total loss of deposits. If you are unsure, obtain independent advice before funding an account. The Company does not provide such advice.

6. Acknowledgement

You acknowledge that derivative-style activity is speculative, that you may lose the entire amount invested, and that you have considered your financial situation, experience and risk tolerance before using live funds.
